

CAWP School-Site and District-wide Programs

When and Where	CAWP programs can meet at a school site at a time convenient for the school's faculty, most often after school and generally for about three hours. Workshops can also be held on inservice days, Saturdays, and during the summer.
Workshop Topics	One-time workshops can serve as an introduction to a large topic such as writing process, writing to learn and more. We are always developing new workshops. Over the past three years, CAWP developed workshops focusing on two new areas: 1) Common Core State Standards reading, writing and assessment (PARCC) and 2) writing and technology. Contact CAWP Director Barbara Kato at bkato@uic.edu or 312-355-4495 to discuss possible topics.
Workshop Series Topics	Writing process, primary writing, writing to learn, writer's craft (advanced), writing assessment (advanced), PARCC preparation with classroom instruction, reading strategies, reading and writing in content areas, emergent literacy, and more.

CAWP Background

The Chicago Area Writing Project (CAWP), based at the University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC), is one of over 200 sites of the National Writing Project. CAWP is an organization of, by, and for teachers of all grade levels, dedicated to improving literacy instruction through a variety of programs in both Chicago area schools and at the university. Since it was founded in 1979, CAWP has trained over 25,500 teachers.

Working from the belief that the best teachers of writing are other teachers of writing, CAWP selects successful classroom teachers to participate in CAWP Invitational Summer Institutes in Writing held at the UIC campus. Upon completion of the Summer Institute, these participants, now called CAWP Teacher Consultants, join the CAWP professional network and design inservice workshops for other classroom teachers throughout the school year with activities, materials, and approaches based on current literacy research and theory and proven successful in their own classes.
